Oklahoma Christian University club to host screening of “In Plain Sight”
Modern-Day Abolitionists aim to spread awareness of sex trafficking in the U.S.

Edmond, Okla. – Oklahoma Christian University’s Modern Abolitionists, an anti-human trafficking club, will host a screening of “In Plain Sight: Stories of Hope and Freedom” on Dec. 17 at 6:45 p.m. The screening will be the Oklahoma premiere of the documentary. The film will be shown in OC’s Cail Auditorium, located in Davisson American Heritage Building. Narrated by contemporary Christian singer Natalie Grant, “In Plain Sight” features six modern-day abolitionists as they fight sex trafficking across America.

Journeying to six U.S. cities, the documentary opens the viewer’s eyes to what is happening down the street “in plain sight.” Through engaging interviews with numerous victims of sex trafficking, the force, coercion and deception of the children and women becomes apparent. In the midst of the darkness, stories of hope and freedom emerge as each survivor shares how she was helped through an aftercare home.

“Most Americans are completely oblivious to the fact that thousands of women and children are enslaved within their own communities,” said David Trotter, co-executive producer. “This isn’t limited to Las Vegas, Los Angeles and New York. We’re talking about cities across America – from Sacramento to Little Rock to Baltimore – where the unthinkable is happening.”

For Grant, the importance of the film centers on concern for children.

“The reality is that children are being ravaged day in and day out. If you have a heart beating on the inside of you, I don’t understand how this couldn’t be important to you,” said Grant, who also serves as co-executive producer.

With a focus on educating the American public and motivating people to take action, the movie was made available to the public at the end of last month.

“I’m really excited about OCMA’s opportunity to host “In Plain Sight,” said Mindy Borth, president of OCMA. “I hope that it will be enlightening to all who see it and encourage them to be aware of what goes on in our own communities.”

Tickets are free for students and faculty of any high school or university. Tickets for all others are $3 for one ticket, or $5 for two tickets. All proceeds will go toward the licensing fee for the film.
